

LITERARY.

A new English work by W. F. Reid, C. E., on "The Manufacture of Portland Cement" has recently made its appearance in London, among the chief merits of which are extensive plagiarisms from Major-General Gilmore's standard American treatise on Lime, Hydraulic Cement and Mortar. We presume that the process in America is now perfectly understood, so far as the writers of the book on the other side of the water, provided due credit is given, and the ordinary courtesy among gentlemen is observed in the matter.

ABBOTT'S LIFE OF CHRIST.
JESUS OF NAZARETH, HIS LIFE AND TEACHINGS; founded on the Four Gospels, and Illustrated by Reference to the Manuscripts, Religious Beliefs, and Political Institutions of His Times. By LYMAN ALLEN. With Designs by Horace de La Roche, Penn, and others. Crown 8vo, Cloth, Bevelled Edges, $2.50.

The hand of a popular writer of fiction has been set to the task of writing a life of Christ that would be no professed theologian and scholars.

The author of this work appeals to the imagination and the heart rather than to the critical judgment of his readers; but, while avoiding polemics and theological disquisitions—everything, in fact, that would lead away from the thread of the story—he has written history, not a romance.

He has given a full account of the Gospel narrative by a careful study of the circumstances and condition of the age.

The results of many years of study embodied in its preparation are not appealed to the narrative, but interests in it—For example, the story of Christ's trial is a perfect reflex of ancient jurisprudence, showing how ingeniously cases have been conducted.

The work opens with a short and graphic account of the Holy Land; then the Rise, Progress, and Fall of the Hebrew Commonwealth is traced down to the existing state of things at the Birth of Christ. John the Baptist's ministry, with an analysis of his teachings, is given as a final prelude to the appearance of Christ on the earthly scene of his wanderings, his sufferings, and his triumph.

Jesus is followed, step by step, from his first appearance as a child in the Temple to his final agony on Mount Calvary. Every part in the wondrous pilgrimage is historically verified, and yet, as told by Mr. Allen Abbott, fits exquisitely in bold and romantic interest my reader that the human eye ever conceived.

The book is elegantly illustrated by drawings made and engraved by the famous artists of the day, and two correct and beautifully colored maps assist the reader in following the weary wanderings of the Savior.

THE CONSPIRACY.

BY MR. EDWARD CHATHAM.

With eight full-page illustrations. One vol. 12mo.

Price $1.25.

In this a very French person, constituted by the First No. Name, a great deal of physical skill, that he page of it fails to show an ample and highly intelligent observer, that stimulates the imagination as well as the judgment of the reader.—[London Review.]

He has given a splendid entertainment, in the way of pointed stories and anecdotes of places and persons.—[Leaven.]

Mr. Allen Abbott's notes that of a trifling pert, but he is not inclined to praise what he has done, but it happens to be American. The book will be widely read and admired in both countries.—[New-York Tribune.]

III.

DR. BELLOWS'S TRAVELS.

COMPLITE.

THE OLD WORLD IN ITS NEW FACH: IMPRESSIONS OF EUROPE IN 1859. By HENRY W. BELLows. 2 Vols. 12mo.

Cloth, $12.50. President of Williams College. One vol. 12mo.

It is interesting all through; it has many picturesque descriptions, and is full sound observation, while it has the greatest strain of being independent and original in tone. Dr. Bellows seems never to say anything just because other travelers have said the same thing, and the thinking portion of the community may study his pages while advantage.—[London Review.]

He is a good painter of the visible, simple, and direct, to read as a record of travel, but presenting larger scenes upon attention than any mere travel-story.—[London Daily News.]

Its merits are that it is written in a lively and agreeable style, that it imparts a great deal of physical skill, that he page of it fails to show an ample and highly intelligent observer, that stimulates the imagination as well as the judgment of the reader.—[London Review.]
